

RAISING TEACHERS NEW COURSE Special Committee Reports on Passing Marks and Grading System.

ACTION IS POSTPONED

Teachers' Council May Submit Proposal to Board of Education for Its Consideration.

A new system of rating teachers which is designed to improve teaching in the district public schools was proposed by a special committee on teachers' ratings in a report submitted to the teachers' council at a special meeting last night in the Franklin School. Definite action on the new plan was deferred until a special meeting called for this purpose on November 28, by the principals of Business High School and president of the council.

Favored by Number of Delegates.

Favorable comment on the proposed change in rating of teachers was voiced by a majority of delegates to the council, and it is believed that the report will be adopted and submitted to the board of education with the request that it be put into practice in the school system. Action on the new plan was postponed last night in order to give delegates to the council an opportunity to discuss it with the principals of the schools which they represent.

Committee's Recommendations.

The report of the special committee recommended that teachers be graded as follows at the end of each year:

"S. superior, E. excellent, V. very good, G. good, F. fair, and U. unsatisfactory."

A mark of fair shall be interpreted as a passing mark, but shall subject the teacher receiving it to intensive supervision for the following year.

A mark of unsatisfactory shall be equivalent to a recommendation for dismissal.

"Teachers shall be graded under the following heads and shall, in addition, receive a general grade for the year."

1. Teaching and class work.

2. System, order, promptness, care of material, attention to heating, lighting, ventilation and hygiene.

3. Self-improvement, civic spirit, participation in school and local activities.

4. Health, excluding artificial standards of weight and over weight.

5. Applied knowledge of related subjects.

6. Initiative, personality, inspiration, creative force, school betterment, high potential value to schools.

7. Requirement for High Rating.

"Teachers who stand very high in all of the first five classes shall be marked excellent."

"Teachers who stand high in four of the first five classes and do good work in the remaining class shall be marked very good."

"Teachers whose work is good, but not excellent, in the first five classes shall be graded good."

"Teachers who stand in the middle, doing fair work, but who show indications of weakness in some of these five classes, shall be marked fair."

"Teachers recommended for dismissal shall be marked unsatisfactory."

"Before the end of the year, the grade shall be effective as a basis for dismissal. It must be verified by two other supervisory officers for a period of at least one semester."

"The few teachers who are excellent in the first five classes and who also excel in the quality of class work shall be rated as superior teachers."

WET CANDIDATES

WIN FOUR STATES

(Continued from First Page.)

on a platform with a plank calling for light wines and beer.

Wins in West, Too.

In Illinois the congressional delegation will take in "wet" votes. Reports indicate the Wisconsin delegation will be "wet," 7 to 4. Wisconsin also re-elected Senator Robert M. La Follette, classed by the dries as an anti-prohibitionist.

In Ohio the complexion of the vote on the wet and dry status underwent several changes during the morning. Once it was found that an error of dry votes had not been in the lead, but returns from country districts later overcame this and the vote stood against beer and wine.

In the seventh Minnesota congressional district returns indicated Representative Andrew J. Cull, a Volsteadite, father of the prohibition act, was making a strong fight to overcome the early lead of the Rev. O. J. Kvale. Kvale drew little hope from this, however, as the Rev. Mr. Kvale has described himself "as dryer than Volstead."

Two Sides Split Even.

In various congressional districts in which the wet and dry question is made an outright campaign issue, the two sides fared about alike, some of the dries being beaten decisively and a few of the wets winning.

J. H. Smith, who campaigned in the sixth Nebraska district on a wet platform, polled only a negligible vote, according to incomplete returns. The wet opponent of W. C. Sears, incumbent in the second district of Nebraska, was defeated easily.

In Indiana J. P. Thurston, a Volsteadite, was defeated by Merrill Moore, who won re-election.

Frank Hagaman, democrat, who made the race in the third Iowa district on a wet platform, was defeated, while among those elected were Robert Clancy, democrat, in the first Michigan, and Clarence McLeod, republican, in the thirteenth Michigan. Clancy was a democratic addition from Michigan and the only member of that party reported elected in the first six districts to report.

Violated Fight Elsewhere.

A. C. Schallenberger, democrat, fifth Nebraska, also a proponent of modification of the Volstead act, had a lead over his republican opponent. Another victorious wet was Representative L. C. Dyer of the twelfth Missouri district. James H. Hanley of Omaha, democrat, defeated in the second Nebraska district, had been classed as "unsatisfactory" by the Anti-Saloon League, while Willis G. Sears, who won in the second district, and Representative M. O. McLaughlin, elected in the fourth, and Robert G. Simmons, in the sixth district, were listed as "satisfactory" to the league. One of Simmons' opponents ran on a beer and light-wine platform.

Edgar Howard, elected representative in the third Nebraska district, was described as "unsatisfactory" to the Anti-Saloon League.

ASHURST SEEMS WINNER.

Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee in Arizona Also Ahead.

PHOENIX, Ariz., November 8.—In complete returns from twenty-five precincts out of 480 in the state given for governor: Hunt, democrat, 2,620; Campbell, republican, 2,425. Senator Ashurst appears re-elected.

Change Is Protested.

MADRID, November 8.—El Action protests against the measures taken by the government of the Philippines for the suppression of the Castilian language as the official medium after December, 1924. It declares that this ill accords with Spain's attitude toward the United States and demands that the Spanish government adopt whatever means are necessary to prevent the suppression of the language.

Party Followers Receive Returns At Headquarters

Followers of the two old parties gathered at their respective headquarters in Washington last night and received the news of the elections. At the headquarters of the republican national committee, in the Munsey building, John T. Adams was surrounded by a large party of republican leaders and committee workers and their friends. Chairman Adams at 9:30 o'clock said he had no comment to make for the time being, but preferred waiting for later returns.

There was a large gathering at the democratic national headquarters in the Bond Building presided over by Mal, Oliver Newman. In the absence of Chairman Cordell Hull.

In the rooms of the joint republican campaign committee of the district, 1242 F street, the returns were received in the presence of several hundred men and women. The democratic central committee of the district received news of the returns in their headquarters in the International Building on F street.

PLAN EARLY FOR BANK BANDITS

Judge Announces Prince Georges Special Grand Jury Will Be Called at Once.

UPPER MARLBORO, Md., November 8.—Swift justice is to be meted out to the four bandits who attempted yesterday to hold up the bank at Clinton, ten miles from here, and were captured in a woods after being tracked down by a posse of several hundred armed farmers. Washington detectives and Maryland police authorities are planning to call the special grand jury immediately.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged bandits' rendezvous, declared today Judge F. H. B. Smith, presiding in the court, that the special grand jury would be called at once to indict the four men on charges of kidnaping, robbery, and conspiracy.

The accused men, who described themselves as William B. Coakley, Francis Dent, the bandit, and Edward E. Humphrey, deputy sheriff, who made the actual arrest a minute before the main body of searchers arrived at the alleged band